Cacao2

Maison Tahite

I can easily cast my vote for Maison Tahite, which presented the chic gourmand Cacao Collection based on a note of chocolate. Its four perfumes are much more difficult to choose from, and yet I prefer Cacao2 (Cacao Squared) with its straightforward approach of “more dark chocolate, more cocoa beans! and less fillers!” of all other variations. You can choose from a chocolate cake with nuts and

Cacao Collection by Maison Tahite

I'll follow my colleagues in noting Maison Tahite's new collection dedicated to cocoa. Hypnotic and joyful fragrances with rather unexpected interpretations of chocolate notes. They will not leave you indifferent even if you, like me, are very skeptical about gourmet and confectionery compositions.

Nº4 Dreamers

Moth and Rabbit

One of the best fragrances I had a chance to try at the show is the novelty of Moth and Rabbit brand, continuing the development of the movie/fragrance concept of its predecessor, La Folie a Plusieurs. The novelty created, like all other fragrances of the brand by Mark Buxton, is called Nº4 Dreamers. It is a catchy, extroverted fragrance with a distinct flavor of the classic '60s. Like Bernardo Bertolucci's

Les Bains Guerbois & HUNQ

Les Bains Guerbois is worthy of a separate thoughtful story, and there have been as many as four in the past two years. I also extremely like the new brand from Amsterdam HUNQ – great fragrances and self-ironic hooligan concept. I'm almost sure it will work.

Dolceacqua, Madeleine & Petra by Masque Milano

For the first time I had the opportunity to try three fragrances from last year's "white" Masque Milano collection, Le Donne di
