Best Fragrances 2022: FRAGRANTICA Editors Choice

2022 has been a strange year. Released, at least partially, from the restrictions of the pandemic, the way back to some form of normality has — for me at least — been a slow, hesitant one rather than a triumphant re-emergence. This seems to have followed a similar path to that of the fragrance world which felt almost timid coming into 2022, but which is going out of the year stronger and bolder despite the numerous challenges it has faced (including cardboard and glass shortages)!

INTIME.EXTIME BY PIERRE GUILLAUME

Cosy comfort suitable for almost all situations.

I feel like Pierre Guillaume must be in a happy place in his life at the moment, because the fragrances he is creating all feel like they have facets of joy running through them. Intime.Extime is a powdery vanilla coupled with white tea and iris, and wearing it makes me feel happy and confident. This is one of my most sprayed fragrances this year and one I know I can rely on for both daytime office wear and evening date nights.

TONKA BODYKON BY PIERRE GUILLAUME

Christmas party scent sorted.

Tonka Bodykon is going to be a mainstay of my scent wardrobe as we enter party season, primarily because it is so rich, so sinuous, and so sweetly ambery. It's a scent which shines off the skin like tinsel on a Christmas tree, catching the light. There's something about the way that Pierre Guillaume puts scents together which really appeals to me, and as far as I am concerned, his releases this year have been as full of joy and brightness as anyone could ask or want.
